Reflection

Currently, our group plans on implementing a feature to allow a risk metric to be accessible from the Augur project. While discussing the project with Professor Goggins, it was determined that the Libyears repository would be used. We've managed to research the repository and have a decent understanding of how we will use Libyears. To host a server for the project, Azure will be utilized. We've managed to successfully set up the software on such a server after running into a handful of issues. All team members plan on performing the tasks of programmers and documenters, while each team member has also been assigned their own individual role. So far, the project seems very do-able, however, it will take a fair amount of work and commitment.
